

Update on Promontory Marina Closure

What's happening at Promontory Marina?

Promontory Marina, including the boat ramp and store, is closed to all public access until summer 2016. PGE needs to use the marina area to construct a new structure, called the North Fork Surface Collector, which will improve downstream fish passage of salmon and steelhead. The Surface Collector is required under PGE's federal license to operate hydroelectric power facilities on the Clackamas River. The marina is the only space in the area large enough to assemble the structure and deploy it on the reservoir. Construction is expected to be completed in Dec. 2015, when the North Fork Surface Collector is expected to begin operation.

What is the North Fork Surface Collector?

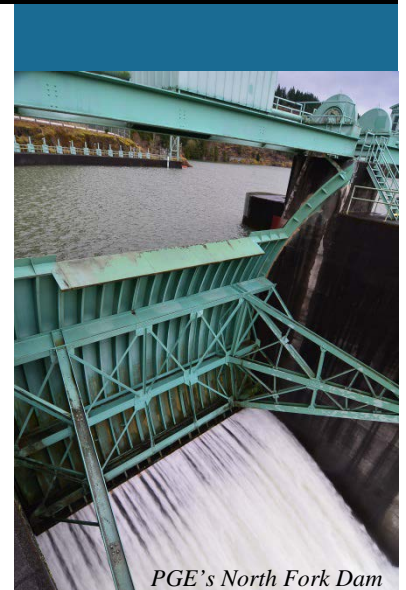

The North Fork Surface Collector will be a floating barge outfitted with pumps and screens that will funnel fish into a collection pipe for safe passage downstream. The structure will be approximately 60 feet wide by 150 feet long and will float in the reservoir near North Fork Dam.

Why is it being built?

PGE has worked with state and federal fish agencies to improve fish passage at its mainstem Clackamas River hydroelectric dams for salmon and steelhead. Improving wild fish passage is not only a requirement for PGE's federal license, but a commitment that PGE maintains to ensure the continuation of healthy fish runs for future generations. The North Fork Surface Collector will use advanced technology to improve the existing fish passage system. The collector will allow us to meet the highest possible fish passage survival for the three dam hydro-project.

How does this project impact fishing and recreation?

All other access points to North Fork Reservoir will be open for the recreation season during the construction of the collector. Promontory Park Campground will open for its regular season and will remain open throughout construction. PGE also offers boating recreation at the following Clackamas Basin reservoirs: Estacada Lake (access from Milo McIver State Park), Lake Harriet and Timothy Lake.
